Comings & Goings: Wine and art clink

Founded in Chicago in 2009 by artist Stephanie King-Myers, Bottle & Bottega swirls creative juices with a glass of wine for inspiration, catering to corporate events, women's book clubs, or anything in between, and plans to open in Naperville next year.

"We look to be in downtown Naperville," says co-owner Nancy Bigley, who brings franchise experience to the eclectic business. "We want to do different things, partner with restaurants and create a unique experience for our guests."

Founder King-Myers says her business allows even beginners to create art while sipping on some wine.

"Our vision is for our guests to walk into our studios or our partner venues and feel like they're having a party in their living room."

Until Bottle & Bottega opens any of the other five Chicago-area locations, they will happily answer any requests and host parties at their other venues, including one in Glen Ellyn.
